ιαεωβαφρενεμουνοθιλαρικριφιαευεαιφικραλιθουνομενερφαβ → Ἰαεω-palindrome.

B: Harpocrates sitting with knees drawn up, facing left, on a lotus flower with two buds. Baseline indicating primeval mound? Head crowned with the sun disk, side-lock of youth falling on the neck, right hand raised to mouth, left hand holding a flail. In front of him, an eight-pointed star, behind him, another eight-pointed star and a crescent. Inscription around the edge, consisting of characteres and some Greek letters, beginning to the right of the flail: ωχηχουζελ → unidentified voces.

Based on similar representations, in which Sarapis leans on a scepter with an ibis at the top, and a passage in the Greek Magical Papyri (PGM V 446ff.), S. Michel raises the possibility of Sarapis being identified with Thoth here, also mentioning the deity's possible identification with Zeus/Hades and Kronos.

On the other hand, the representation of Harpocrates on a lotus flower connects the gem with love charms. A praxis known from a papyrus (PGM LXI 1-38) specifies that love charms had to be incised with the image of Horus on a lotus flower and the magical name Abraxas. Pieces with the Horus-scheme used as love charms: CBd-533, CBd-534.
